RE: NEW YORK STATE'S PETITION FOR EXPEDITED WAIVER OF THE CONNECT AMERICA PHASE II AUCTION RULES – WC Docket No. 10-90

Dear Secretary Dortch:

The Middleburgh Telephone Company hereby respectfully submits this letter in response to New York State's Petition for Expedited Waiver (the "Petition") filed on October 12, 2016 in the above-referenced proceeding.

As a 119-year old, 4th generation, family owned ILEC operating as an ETC and providing services in very rural parts of New York state (Schoharie County and rural parts of Albany County), we fully support the Petition and the many benefits that would arise from the granting of the Petition and its approval on an expedited basis.

As noted in the Petition, Congress, the Courts, and the FCC recognize that states have an important role in advancing the country's Universal Service goals. It is clear that New York has taken a leadership position in advancing universal service, most recently through the establishment of the State's $500 million "New NY Broadband Program." This ambitious program is critical to the deployment of broadband infrastructure in areas of the State where our private investment and ability to build out alone is not sufficient.

The benefits of granting the waiver request are compelling and will undoubtedly assist in the goal of bringing high-quality broadband service to those areas of New York subject to the Phase II auction (the "CAF Territories"). In addition to the benefits achieved through federal-state alignment, the proposal also mitigates concerns presented by holding separate and uncoordinated federal and state auction processes. These include potential funding of duplicative broadband networks and disparate federal-state funding requirements.

Grant of the Petition and the establishment of a single auction process will provide us and many other a greater level of clarity and certainty will assist in our decision making concerning whether to participate in any auction program. Conversely, two separate and uncoordinated programs would introduce uncertainty and would likely have negative consequences for potential broadband deployment in the CAF Territories, as described in the Petition. A single auction process also provides far more cost efficiencies and financial synergies in meeting the challenges of bringing broadband services to those underserved and unserved areas of the state, which can be passed along to consumers through higher-quality broadband services.

New York, through its Empire State Development (ESD) agency, is well positioned to administer a state-level auction process for CAF Phase II areas in conjunction with the state's Broadband funding initiative. The State has invested significant time and resources in the development of an auction process, including extensive outreach with varied interested parties in the State and the involvement of experts in telecommunications, economics and costing and pricing as well as consulting with FCC staff. These efforts allowed New York to acquire an in-depth understanding of local broadband needs, which resulted in a successful and extremely timely conclusion in the first round of auctions conducted by the ESD.

Incentivizing the providers, such as MIDTEL, to deploy broadband infrastructure in some of the most rural areas of New York is not a simple business case. Such a venture requires considerable capital expenditures and entails significant operating risk, but is something ILEC's like us are accustomed to doing, but we need assistance.

It is for these reasons that we encourage the FCC to expeditiously grant the New York Waiver to align the FCC and State funding structures. This would give the CAF territories the highest, and most likely only chance for receiving high quality broadband and those consumers the best opportunity to thrive.

The Middleburgh Telephone Company fully supports granting of the waiver as requested by the State of New York and strongly believes it is in the public interest.

Sincerely,

James R. Becker

President
